We take the following account of the marriage of the Rev. J. B. Cleaver, tormerly a law student of this city, and wellknown to many of our citizens, which going to St. Louis or any other place for from the Brooklyn Eagle :

The First Baptist church, in Nassau street, near Fulton, was a flood of light last evening, which seemed to indicate the occurrence of an event of more than extraordinary interest. The throng of elegantly dressed ladies and gentlemen who were seen to enter between the hours of seven and eight o'clock, said plainer than words that no customary prayer or business meeting was to take place; the carriages which frequently stopped at the doors of the edifice and disposed of their contents served to carry out this impression among the curious ones who blockaded the sidewaik. The occasion for this display was the fact that the Rev. Jos. Bradford Cleaver, pastor of the Lincoln place Baptist Church, was to be married to Miss Mary Beebe Bilss, of Sixth avenue.

Coal Oil Chandeliers, Cake Significant Chardeliers, Cake Sig The eye of any practiced observer would, on passing the church, have divined the nature of the gathering, as there was, as there always is on such an occasion, a large number of ladies, who, not having been blessed with a card of invitation were content to satisfy their inherent longing and interest in such an event with the crambs of information which fell from prices, the lips of their more fortunate sisters, who are generally full of talk, sweet noth-
